A wise man decided to build a house. He spent a long time building it. He dug deep down into the ground to make sure that the house was built on rock. One day, when the man had finished building his house, there was a big storm and a flood. The water beat against the house, but the house was built on rock, so it didn't fall down.

There was also a foolish man who built a house. He built his house quickly because he decided to build it on soft ground. When the storms came the water beat hard against the house. The soft ground wasn't strong enough to hold the house and the whole house fell down!
